8 Questions to Ask Before You Hire a Concrete Prep Contractor

Surface preparation determines whether a coating, overlay or new striping lasts. Ask any preparation company these 8 questions before you hire them, BlastTex included.

Question	Why it matters	How BlastTex answers
1. Will I receive a written scope and price before you start?	A verbal estimate can change once equipment is on site	Yes. Every project receives a written proposal, and extras happen only by a written change order you approve
2. Are you insured, and can I see the certificate?	Protects you from liability for an incident on your property	Commercial general liability insured; certificate on request
3. What preparation method will you use, and what profile will you leave?	Coatings require a specific profile (CSP) to bond. Acid etching does not remove existing coatings	Mechanical shot blasting to the CSP on your coating's data sheet, with edges ground
4. How do you control the dust?	Concrete dust contains respirable silica and spreads easily	HEPA dust extraction on every shot blaster
5. Do you bring your own equipment and power?	Reliance on site power or rented equipment can cause delays	Company-owned shot blasters, scrubbers, generator and trailer
6. Who will actually oversee my project?	Accountability should rest with the person who scoped the work	Chris Hoover, the owner, personally oversees every project
7. Will you photograph the floor before, during and after?	Photos settle questions later, for you and your installer	Time- and date-stamped photos of every project
8. What is not included?	Unstated exclusions are a common source of disputes	Listed in writing: no coating installation, crack repair, moisture testing or degreasing

Bonus question: are you also selling me the coating?

A company that sells coatings may recommend its own product. BlastTex provides preparation and cleaning only, so our recommendations are product-neutral and focused on a properly prepared floor.

Request a written proposal

Commercial projects within 50 miles of Hurst receive a free site walk. Garages and driveways start at $1,500; commercial shot blasting starts at $2,500.
